EXTENDED TO NOVEMBER 18

THE GREAT WAR: PORTRAITS OF PRIVILEGE, DUTY, AND SACRIFICE

As the winds of war swirled across Europe in 1914, Americans faced decisions about their response to the conflict. Some answered calls by the preparedness movement and enlisted in military reserve units. Others used their wealth and influence to lead the response to the humanitarian crisis caused by the conflict.

Drawing upon the archival collections of Old Westbury Gardens, descendants, and the National Archives, The Great War: Portraits of Privilege, Duty, and Sacrifice explores the response of individual Americans to a distant struggle that soon became a world-wide conflict. Americans faced a decision about their commitment to their nation and to others.

The exhibition introduces World War I—its causes, responses by Americans prior to the declaration of war against Germany by the US in April 1917, and the subsequent mobilization of social institutions, human labor, and popular will, particularly on Long Island.

The stories of Long Islanders like John S. Phipps and their personal role in the war challenge the way we understand duty, honor and obligation today.

The Great War: Portraits of Privilege, Duty, and Sacrifice is on display in Westbury House and is included with admission. Extended through November 18
