World War I Centennial

The Volunteers: Americans Join World War I, 1914-1919 is a special exhibition on loan from the National World War I Museum and Memorial in Kansas City, Mo. The exhibit presents descriptions, documents and artwork detailing the ways in which Americans aided war efforts through humanitarian and military relief.

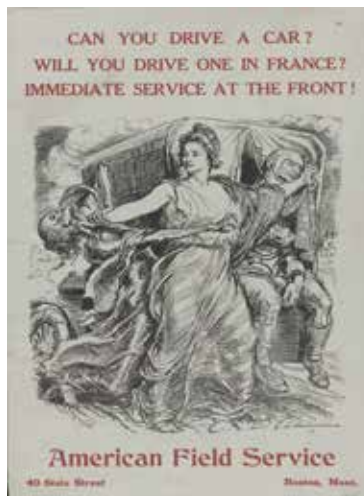

Countless local, regional and national groups throughout the U.S. such as the American Field Service, the YMCA and the YWCA provided labor, food, entertainment and physical support to Allied forces. Additionally, the French Foreign Legion afforded Americans the earliest opportunity to fight on the front lines. The contributions of these men and women to war-torn countries was pivotal in the early stages of war.

The Volunteers: Americans Join World War I, 1914-1919 is on display in Westbury House and is included admission. March 31-July 1. 10am-5pm.

The efforts of the American Field Service are among those highlighted in the exhibition, which features images, stories and documents from its archives. American ambulance drivers played key roles in several battles during the early stages war, most notably in parts of France, and often served under extremely dangerous missions on the Western Front.

World War I New York

Book Talk by Kevin Fitzpatrick

In 1917 one million soldiers, sailors, and Marines departed for France to fight for the First World War from New York. The city was an important hub during the war as the recruiting and patriotic efforts continued.

Kevin Fitzpatrick, author of World War I New York: A Guide to the City's Enduring Ties to the Great War, will discuss the locations where the war touched and how New Yorkers would memorialize the Great War in statuary and other designations.

Mr. Fitzpatrick is an author, historian, noted walking tour guide. He has appeared on the Travel Channel, C-SPAN American History TV, BBC Radio, NPR, and many more outlets.

Following the presentation there will be a q&a with the author and reception featuring light appetizers and the signature cocktail from the era, The French 75.

World War I Centennial

The Great War: Portraits of Privilege, Duty, and Sacrifice

June 23–October 7

Captain John S. Phipps,
US Army Air Service.

As the winds of war swirled in Europe in 1914, Americans faced decisions about their response to the conflict. Some answered calls by the preparedness movement and enlisted in military reserve units. Others used their influence and wealth to lead the relief response to the refugee crisis in Belgium and France.

Drawing upon the archival collections of Old Westbury Gardens, descendants, and the National Archives, The Great War: Portraits of Privilege, Duty, and Sacrifice explores how Americans responded to what at first seemed a distant struggle, yet as the war continued became a conflict too close to home. Ethnic and national loyalties, accounts of civilian calamities, and an escalating demand for monetary loans, as well as agricultural and manufactured goods forced Americans to confront issues of allegiance, obligation, and national defense they had not experienced in three generations.

The exhibition introduces World War I—its causes, responses by Americans prior to the declaration of war against Germany by the US in April 1917, and the subsequent mobilization of social institutions, human labor, and popular will, particularly on Long Island. Visitors will then engage with the participation of noted Long Islanders like John S Phipps and his peers whose personal response to the Great War challenge the way we understand of duty, honor and obligation today.

The Great War—: Portraits of Privilege, Duty, and Sacrifice is on display in Westbury House and is included admission. June 23–October 7

Garden Faire and Gymkhana

Living History Weekend Saturday & Sunday, June 23 & 24

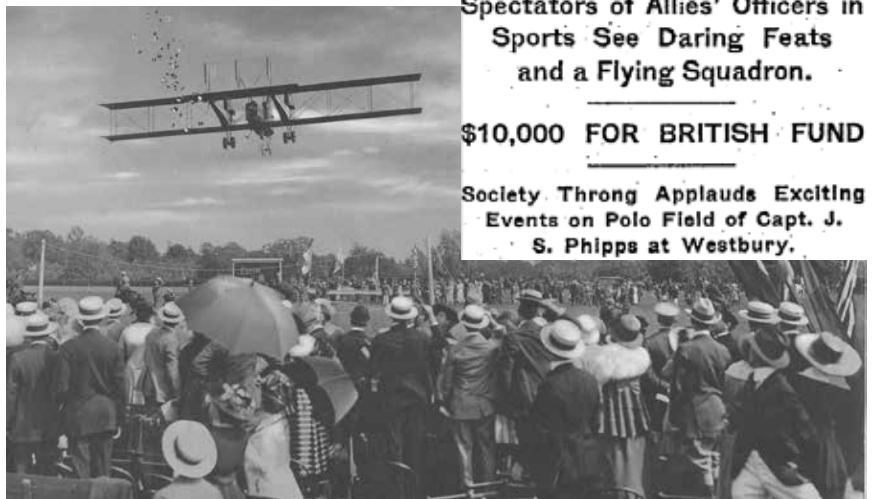

A weekend of activities for all ages.

In June 1918 John S. Phipps held a gymkhana (jim-'ka-nə) on his estate for the relief of the families of British and Canadian servicemen. This event included equestrian games and demonstrations, food tents and flyovers by military aircraft based at Mitchell Field.

Join us as we commemorate this event with a “living history” weekend with WWI re-enactors, period vehicles, crafts and games for children and horse demonstrations. And in keeping with the “British” flavor of the original Phipps’s gymkhana there will be a tea tent featuring English baked goods, music performances, Morris dance demonstrations, and other faire experiences.

Information

About

Old Westbury Gardens, listed on the National Register of Historic Places, is the former country estate of John S. Phipps and his wife Margarita Grace Phipps. Opened to the public in 1959 with the mission of preserving a part of Long Island's heritage, Old Westbury Gardens is an extraordinary example of a gracious era. Built in 1906 by the English designer George A. Crawley, Westbury House is a magnificent country house reflecting English architecture of the late 1600s and early 1700s. The house is furnished with fine English antiques and decorative arts and remains virtually intact from the more than 50 years of the family's residence. The estate includes over 70 acres of landscaped formal and informal gardens. An additional 160 acres of fields and woodlands surround the estate.
